Iraq Expels U.S. Security Firm

Blackwater USA ordered out after civilian shooting deaths

BAGHDAD | The Iraqi government Monday ordered Blackwater USA, the security firm that protects U.S. diplomats, to stop work and leave the country after the fatal shooting of eight Iraqi civilians following a car bomb attack against a State Department convoy.

The order by the Interior Ministry, if carried out, would deal a severe blow to U.S. government operations in Iraq by stripping diplomats, engineers, reconstruction officials and others of their security protection.

The presence of so many Western security contractors has angered many Iraqis, who consider them a mercenary force that runs roughshod over people in their own country.

Sunday’s shooting was the latest in a series of incidents in which Blackwater and other foreign contractors have been accused of shooting to death an unknown number of Iraqi citizens. None has faced charges or prosecution.

Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice telephoned Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki late Monday, and the two agreed to conduct a “fair and transparent investigation” and hold any wrongdoers accountable, said Yassin Majid, an adviser to the prime minister.

The U.S. clearly hoped the Iraqis would be satisfied with an investigation, a finding of responsibility and compensation to the victims’ families — and not insist on expelling a company the Americans cannot operate here without. (AP)

In Gaza, Rivalries Reshape Ramadan

STAR BRIGHT: A Palestinian Muslim girl on Monday peers through lights hung for the holy fasting month of Ramadan. A year of Palestinian infighting in Gaza has altered Ramadan customs. Gaza’s musaharatis, who bang on drums to wake people for pre-dawn prayers, used to be able to chant the praises of political figures while making their rounds. Now they must take care not to praise Fatah leaders in a Hamas stronghold — or the other way around.

Everyone but the Bird Saw The Potential Comedic Value

An animal expert and a flamingo became trapped while trying to squeeze through an airport security turnstile. It took firefighters to finally extract the bird. Jack Hanna, director emeritus of the Columbus [Ohio] Zoo, was returning from a fundraiser with a mongoose, a small leopard and the flamingo, all in crates. The entourage arrived at the airport to find the terminal closed. The only way to leave the tarmac was through a tall metal turnstile with horizontal bars. "I never thought about the crate being square and the turnstile being round," said Hanna. (AP)

'No, We CAN'T Just Make Another Copy!'

Prized replacement copies of a lost Danish treasure — a pair of golden horns that were stolen in 1802 — have been snatched. Burglars struck early Monday at a Jelling, Denmark, museum, stealing the replicas of the two originals, which are believed to date back to the year 400. The horns weighed more than 6 pounds and were stolen in 1802 by a goldsmith who melted them into fake coins and jewelry. The replicas were made in 1979 after studies of old police reports from 1802. Alleged Simpson Tape Is Released

Web site says reported incident at Las Vegas hotel was recorded

LAS VEGAS | An apparent audiotape of O.J. Simpson's standoff with men he accused of stealing his memorabilia begins with the ex-NFL star demanding, "Don't let nobody out of here."

"Think you can steal my [expletive] and sell it?" the voice identified as Simpson's said.

Simpson was arrested Sunday and booked on charges connected with what police described as a robbery at a Las Vegas hotel. In the audiotape released Monday by the Web site TMZ.com, a man believed to be Simpson is heard shouting questions while other men yell orders to the people in the room.

The recording was made by Thomas Riccio, co-owner of the auction house Universal Rarities, according to TMZ.

Riccio told TMZ he believed Simpson was planning to confront Alfred Beardsley, who was allegedly planning to auction off the memorabilia.

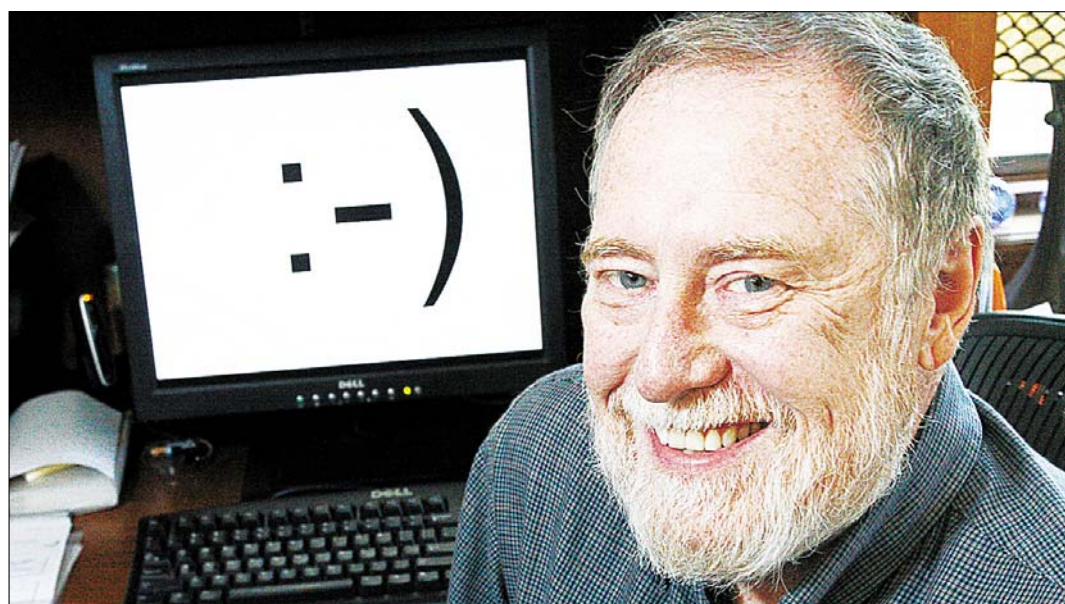

Another collector at the scene, Bruce Fromong, said the meeting was set up as if the men were customers, but when they arrived, it was clear something else was going on.

"The door burst open and they came in almost commando style, O.J. Simpson and some of his people, I guess you would call it, with guns drawn," Fromong told ABC's "Good Morning America" on Monday. "O.J. at that time was saying, 'I want my stuff. I want my stuff.'"

After being whisked away in handcuffs, Simpson was booked Sunday night on two counts of robbery with a deadly weapon, two counts of assault with a deadly weapon, and conspiracy to commit a crime and burglary with a firearm, police said. If convicted, Simpson could face up to 30 years in prison on each robbery count. RYAN NAKASHIMA (AP)

Research: Men's Hygiene Worse Than Women's

CHICAGO | The gender gap has widened when it comes to hygiene, according to the latest stakeout by the "hand washing police." One-third of men didn't bother to wash after using the bathroom, compared with 12 percent of women, said the researchers who spy on people in public restrooms. They reported their findings Monday at a meeting of infectious disease scientists.

Two years ago, the last time the survey was done, only one-quarter of men didn't wash, compared with 10 percent of women.

The latest study was based on observations last month of more than 6,000 people in four big cities. (AP)

Dems Welcome AG Choice

Nominee is not likely to face opposition in confirmation process

WASHINGTON | President Bush, seeking to avoid a possible confirmation fight over a fiercely partisan candidate, chose retired federal judge Michael B. Mukasey Monday to replace Attorney General Alberto Gonzales. Democrats said Bush made a wise choice and raised no immediate objections.

As chief judge of the busy U.S. District Court for the Southern District of New York, Mukasey had presided over high-profile terrorism cases.

"He knows what it takes to fight this war effectively, and he knows how to do it in a manner consistent with our laws and our Constitution," Bush said.

Mukasey said he was honored to be Bush's nominee to take the helm of the department.

Senate Democrats made it clear that there would be no confirmation hearings until the administration answers questions about the White House's role in the firings of federal prosecutors over the winter.

"Our focus now will be on securing the relevant information we need so we can proceed to schedule fair and thorough hearings," said Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., the chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Clinton Unveils Health Plan

System would require that every American have health insurance

DES MOINES, IOWA | Democratic presidential candidate Sen. Hillary Rodham Clinton issued a call for universal health care on Monday, plunging back into a political battle she memorably waged and lost as first lady more than a decade ago.

"This is not government-run," Clinton said of her plan to extend coverage to an estimated 47 million Americans who lack it.

"Perhaps more than anybody else, I know just how hard this fight will be," Clinton said.

Dismissing Republican criticism, Clinton admonished the crowd. "I know my Republican opponents will try to equate health care for all Americans with government-run health care. Don't let them fool us again. This is not government-run."

Sen. Hillary Clinton, D-N.Y., is pushing for universal health care in the U.S.

A front-running contender for her party's nomination, Clinton drew criticism this time from fellow Democrats, as well as Republicans.

"To ensure all Americans have affordable health care will take more than leadership that simply knows how to fight," said rival Sen. Chris Dodd, D-Conn.

Addressing a crowd at a medical center in Iowa, Clinton laid out her proposal, with the centerpiece a so-called "individual mandate," requiring everyone to have health insurance.

Clinton's plan builds on the existing employer-based system. People who receive insurance through the workplace could continue to do so; businesses would be required to offer insurance to employees or contribute to a government-run pool that would help pay for those not covered. BETH FOUHY (AP)

DO LONDON LIKE A LOCAL

www.visitlondon.com

Want to know the best places to shop in London? Ask a local....

London is full of boutiques, markets and shops that will appeal to every kind of shopper looking for great value for money. Whatever you want, from clothes to crafts and funky fashion to fine art – you'll find it all in London.

Meet Lucy, Lloyd and Linda, three Londoners happy to share their local shopping secrets with you.

Lucy

I love shopping for clothes, you could definitely say I have a passion for fashion.

I'm always looking for unusual clothes and Camden Lock Market is a great place to find fab designs and vintage fashions at great prices. I mix up my look and there is so much on offer at the market I can easily spend the day there – and when the shopping wears me out there are loads of cool bars and restaurants I can relax in – it's a real locals hangout.

Another of my shopping havens is Spitalfields Market in East London. Lots of new local up and coming designers have stalls there so you might be buying the next Marc Jacobs or Vivienne Westwood but not at the designer prices! Nearby there are lots more stores to rummage in, from thrift stores to trendy boutiques, to really hone my look.

Next, it's onto Brick Lane, home to some of London's best curry restaurants and some great nightlife. The atmosphere is great in this part of town and I love to meet with friends in the evening to gossip over a cocktail or two.

When I'm not shopping in markets I often head over to Seven Dials, a collection of streets very close to the famous Covent Garden. There I can find a mixture of small boutiques as well as fashion stores such as Diesel, Miss Sixty and Cath Kidston. I also try and pick up presents for my boyfriend from G-Star and Carhartt. You'll find the place packed with Londoners.

Lloyd

Like a lot of Londoners, when it comes to shopping there is only one thing I'm looking for – food! Nothing beats going to a local market and finding locally produced vegetables, cheese and bread. I'm lucky, I live near one of London's 13 Farmers Markets and I love to see and smell all the fresh and seasonal goods laid out.

I'm definitely a foodie and there are loads of specialist shops in London where I can get the very best products. Neals Yard Dairy stocks a huge range of cheeses and I can pick up specially blended teas from Twinings on The Strand.

The best thing about food shopping in London is that there is so much diversity, I can get Asian foods from China Town, authentic Greek food from Green Lanes and Polish delicacies from Ealing.

When I'm feeling very determined, I set my alarm clock for 5am and head down to Billingsgate Fish Market, the largest inland fish market in the UK. I really enjoy seeing the different fish that have been brought in that day both from the UK coasts and from overseas. We Londoners will go to great lengths for the best produce!

Linda

I live in central London, which is perfect because I can find everything I need in one place. I'm lucky because Oxford Street, the most famous street in the world is my local shopping street!

I'm surrounded by lots of high street fashion shops but also some great department stores such as Selfridges, John Lewis, Debenhams and House of Fraser. The department stores are just my cup of tea because I can easily browse from one department to the next and pick up everything from kitchen essentials to stationery at reasonable prices.

After more shopping on Regent Street I usually pop into the world famous Hamley's Toy store to pick up a little surprise for my grandchildren.

I'm always having friends and relatives to stay and I often take them out for the day. Greenwich Market is always fun as we browse through the unique arts and crafts stalls and maybe stop for a little snack. Once we've explored the market we stroll over to Greenwich Park, one of London's eight Royal parks, where I love to show people the stunning views across the capital. It's where all the locals hang out too.

For a truly fragrant experience, I call in to the Colombia Road Flower Market. With over 50 stalls selling exotic flowers and beautiful pot plants, I find it enjoyable to just wander round and take in the smells and colour of the market. Get there early to get the full experience; it's so dazzling it even takes Londoners' breath away.

War-weary citizens celebrate election of Koroma as president

FREETOWN, SIERRA LEONE | Sierra Leone's battle-weary citizens chose an opposition leader as their next president, voting against the party that ushered the country out of a devastating war in 2002 and for the promise of less corruption and more jobs.

Ernest Bai Koroma was sworn in Monday hours after election officials declared him the winner of a tense run-off vote with 55 percent of 1.7 million ballots cast, compared with 45 percent for the ruling party candidate, Vice President Solomon Berewa.

Thousands of Koroma's supporters wearing red T-shirts and hats clogged the streets of the capital city of Freetown, singing and dancing through a heavy midday downpour.

Ruling party officials decried the outcome but did not say whether they would reject the results.

"It is part of the international conspiracy, but they will not get away with it," Jacob Jusu Saffa, secretary general of the ruling Sierra Leone People's Party, said in a radio broadcast.

The election, the first presidential vote since U.N. peacekeepers withdrew two years ago, was seen as a test of whether the West African country has emerged from the chaos wrought by a decade-long war.

Koroma, a former insurance company executive, promised to root out corruption and create economic opportunities. (AP)

THAILAND | INVESTIGATORS SEEK CAUSE OF PLANE CRASH

INSIDE THE WRECKAGE: Thai rescue workers inspect a charred plane in Phuket, Thailand, on Monday. Authorities found the two flight data recorders from the plane, which crashed and killed 89 people — most of whom were foreigners — on Sunday. Airline officials said that wind shear and heavy rains were possible causes of the accident.

Election Law Changes May Aid Musharraf

ISLAMABAD, PAKISTAN | Pakistan's Election Commission changed the rules Monday to open the way for President Gen. Pervez Musharraf to seek a new five-year presidential term without giving up the powerful position of army chief.

Opposition parties decried the move as a brazen violation of the constitution and accused the U.S.-allied leader of trying to bulldoze legal obstacles to his staying in power amid increasing demands for an end to military rule.

The five-member commission changed a rule so a constitutional article barring government employees — such as army officers — from running no longer applies. (AP)

Females establish committee to lobby against longtime ban

JIDDAH, SAUDI ARABIA | For the first time, a group of women in the only country that bans females from driving have formed a committee to lobby for the right to get behind the wheel, and they plan to petition King Abdullah in the next few days for the privilege.

The government is unlikely to respond because the issue remains so highly sensitive and divisive. But committee members say their petition will at least highlight what many Saudis consider a "stolen" right.

"We would like to remind officials that this is, as many have said, a social and not a religious or political issue," said Fowziyyah al-Oyouni, a founding member of the Committee of Demanders of Women's Right to Drive Cars. "And since it's a social issue, we have the right to lobby for it."

Committee members want to deliver their petition to the king by Sunday, the country's national day.

The last time the issue was raised was two years ago, when Mohammed al-Zulfa, a member of the unelected Consultative Council, asked his colleagues to consider studying the possibility of allowing women over age 35 or 40 to drive — unchaperoned on city streets but accompanied by a male guardian on highways.

The idea touched off a fierce controversy that included calls for al-Zulfa to be removed from the council and stripped of his citizenship, as well as accusations he was encouraging women to commit the double sins of discarding their veils and mixing with men. DONNA ABU-NASR (AP)

China Steps Up Product Inspections

BEIJING | China has sharply increased inspections of imported U.S. food, escalating a dispute with Washington over product safety and leaving American beef piling up in warehouses and delaying shipments of black pepper and other goods.

Authorities who used to inspect as little as 5 percent of imported goods now check every shipment of American poultry, snack foods and other products, companies and trade groups say. The inspections are the latest volley after a series of large-scale recalls raised scrutiny of Chinese-made products in the U.S. (AP)

REEF MADNESS: Maryland officials say an artificial oyster reef near Gibson Island was wrongly installed and must be removed. This is the first time the state will have to dismantle a man-made reef. State officials say the reef in Sillery Bay was installed in the wrong place and is a boating hazard.

Off-Duty Baltimore Officer Involved in Fatal Shooting

Baltimore police say a man shot by an off-duty officer Monday morning in north Baltimore has died. Spokesman Sterling Clifford says the preliminary investigation shows nine-year-veteran Lawrence Armwood was dropping a friend off and waiting for someone to pick her up around 4 a.m. Police say the suspect approached Armwood's car and pointed a handgun at them. Police say Armwood pulled out his service weapon and shot the man twice. (AP)

D.C. Rallies on Eve of Senate Vote

City officials, advocacy group gather at Capitol for congressional rights

WASHINGTON | Activists holding signs that read "I Demand the Vote," gathered Monday on Capitol Hill to rally support ahead of a key Senate vote on a bill that would give the District of Columbia a full vote in Congress.

Lawmakers are expected to decide Tuesday whether the measure, which also would give Utah another House seat, should advance to the Senate floor for debate and a later vote. It remains unclear whether advocates have the 60 votes needed to overcome an attempt by Republican leaders to block the measure.

"Not since segregation has the Senate blocked a voting rights bill, and this is a voting rights bill," D.C. Mayor Adrian M. Fenty told about 50 people who attended a news conference in front of the Dirksen Senate Office Building. Among those joining Fenty at the rally were former Republican congressman Jack Kemp of New York D.C. Delegate Eleanor Holmes Norton and Ilir Zherka, head of the advocacy group DC Vote.

Kemp urged his fellow Republicans to "vote your conscience. Vote the American way. Get on the right side of history."

D.C. voting rights advocates call the issue the most important civil rights struggle of the day. The District's delegate in Congress is allowed to vote only in House committees. (AP)

Greater Southeast Hospital May Be Sold

WASHINGTON | Greater Southeast Community Hospital would be sold to a New England-based company with a $79 million investment from the District of Columbia under a deal announced Monday by Mayor Adrian M. Fenty.

Specialty Hospitals of America LLC, of Portsmouth, N.H., agreed to purchase the financially troubled hospital from Envision Hospital Corp. if the District government invests heavily in the hospital's infrastructure and helps pay off its debts. The D.C. Council must approve the deal.

Terms of the proposed sale call for the city to lend Specialty $20 million to help cover the purchase price and daily operations of the hospital, Fenty said.

The city also would invest $30 million in new infrastructure and equipment for the hospital as a direct grant that would not have to be repaid. (AP)

AOL Leaves Va. for N.Y.C.

Company to move its HQ, but most workers will remain in Dulles

AOL is moving its corporate headquarters from Dulles to New York, it announced Monday, ending a saga that helped cement Washington as a center of the technology boom but also gave rise to corporate scandal and ill-fated deal-making.

The company employs 4,000 people in Northern Virginia and most will remain here, according to AOL's announcement of the move. Senior executives, however, will be transferred to new headquarters at 770 Broadway in Manhattan.

Formerly America Online, the company in recent years abandoned its original fee-for-service model as subscriptions declined and Internet access was taken over by cable and telephone companies. In a press release, executives said they are making the move to be closer to the center of the advertising industry that is now crucial to AOL's success.

Locally, the move is not expected to make an immediate economic impact. But officials acknowledge it deals a symbolic blow to the region.

Bobbie Kilberg, chief executive of the Northern Virginia Technology Council, warned the impact may be great down the road. "It may not be that many jobs lost now, but over the long-term, you can't help but wonder whether they will lose more people from the Dulles campus. That's inevitable when you put the leadership in New York City," she said.

Microsoft Loses Appeal vs. EU

BRUSSELS, BELGIUM | Microsoft lost its appeal of a European anti-trust order Monday that obliges the technology giant to pay a record $613 million fine, share communications code with rivals and sell a copy of Windows without Media Player.

In a stinging defeat for the world's biggest software maker, the court decision also affirms Europe's role as the lead international regulator of dominant companies. The EU Court of First Instance said the European Commission was correct in concluding that Microsoft was guilty of monopoly abuse. (AP)

COLLEGE FOOTBALL | BY MATT SWENSON

Irish Heyday Is Long Gone

THE GOLDEN ERA IS OVER for Notre Dame, and it has been for a while.

That debacle of a 38-0 loss at Michigan should serve as a slap in the face for the once-proud program.

No matter who the coach is — Bob Davie, Tyrone Willingham or even “genius” Charlie Weis — Notre Dame just isn’t what it used to be.

No longer can the ghosts of Knute Rockne, Frank Leahy or Lou Holtz (OK, he’s not dead, but he sure looks warmed over on ESPN) will Notre Dame to championships.

The occasional 10-win season — even aided by a soft schedule such as last year’s — is the best the Irish can hope for.

There’s nothing wrong with

Notre Dame must join a conference. ... Then the school could accept that it’s not better than everyone else.

10 wins for most schools, but to put this in perspective, 10 victories is mediocre for USC, Florida or Oklahoma. And none of those teams would still be waiting for an offensive touchdown three weeks into a season.

Notre Dame must join a conference, preferably the Big Ten. Not only would that guarantee four or five wins per year, but then the school could accept that it’s not better than everyone else, which it still pretends by scheduling the nation’s best teams and skipping the conference system everyone else employs.

The Fighting Irish will always have their history, but it’s time to stop living in the past.

No Fairy Tale Start for the Saints

A handful of NFL teams have tanked in weeks 1 and 2 this year

NFL | When the New Orleans Saints lost 41-10 in Indianapolis on opening night, it was disheartening but not unexpected.

The Colts and Peyton Manning can do that to teams, even Super Bowl caliber teams.

However, a 31-14 loss to what was supposed to be an ordinary Tampa Bay side on Sunday put the first defeat in perspective. It was one of a number of losses that highlighted how bad some NFL teams have been the first two weeks.

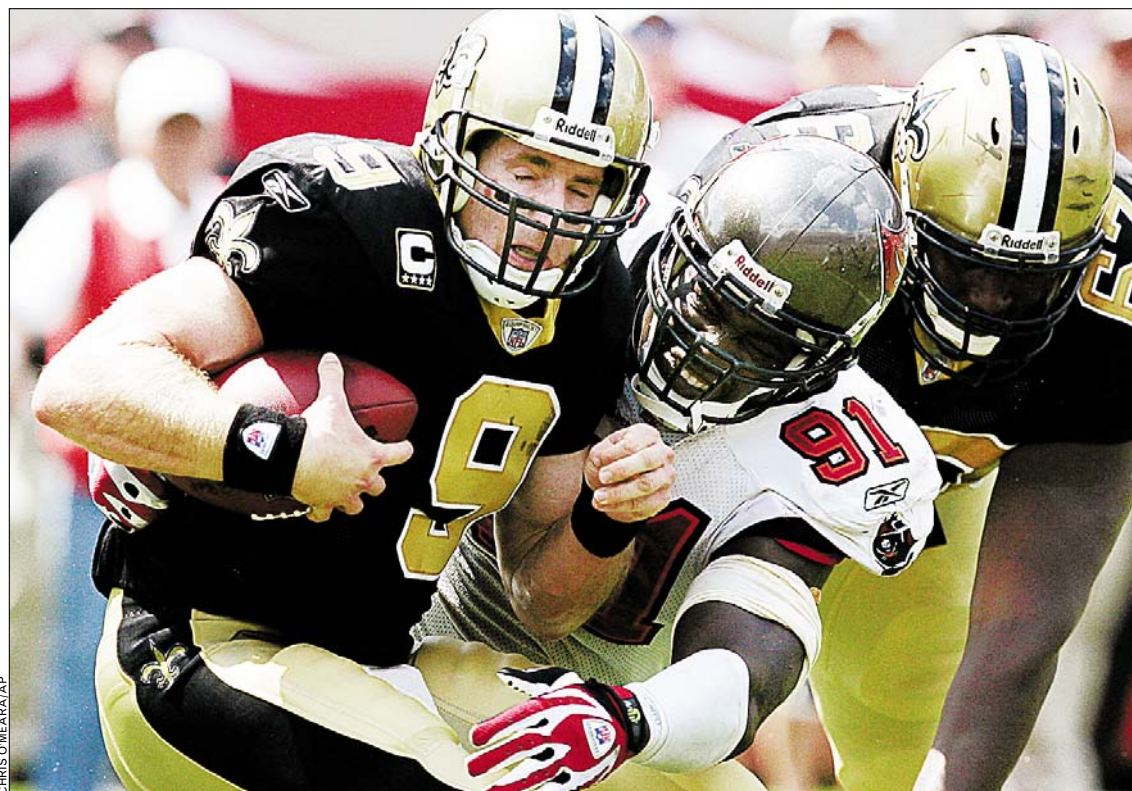

Following a fairy tale 2006 season in which the Saints reached the NFC championship game for the first time in their 40-year history, some thought they would reach the Super Bowl.

New Orleans isn’t the only team with question marks. Consider:

The Cincinnati defense gave up 51 points to a Cleveland team that was the first ever to trade away its quarterback after one week

The Broncos are 2-0. But they were lucky to win both of those games — against the Bills and the Raiders. They aren’t going to get close to the Patriots or Colts in the AFC that way.

The New York Giants made Tony Romo look like his idol Brett Favre in the opener. Then it made Brett, playing with a bunch of youngsters, look like Brett, circa 10 years ago.

The New Orleans Saints’ offense, led by quarterback Drew Brees, left, has been stagnant in the first two weeks of the season.

The Chargers went to New England and got pasted by a team that might be even money to go unbeaten without the need of illegal intelligence.

Some of the problems around the NFL were expected, like the Giants’ and Bengals’ defenses, although not to the extent they’ve shown themselves.

The Saints and Chargers are another story.

“A couple of Tampa Bay guys came up to me after the game and they said that it’s going to be tough, that everybody is gunning for you now, and you guys are going to be marked,” New Orleans linebacker Scott Fujita said after their game Sunday.

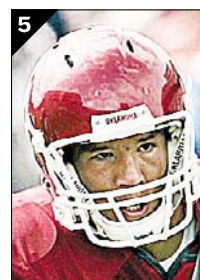

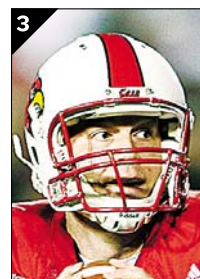

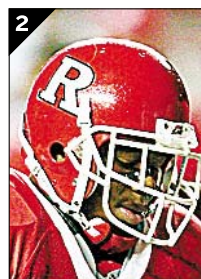

“I came into this season liking that feeling. I always wanted to be at the top and have people gunning for us. Whatever it is, we have to get our focus.” DAVE GOLDBERG (AP)

Sports

The Last King of Baseball

It's been 40 seasons since Carl Yastrzemski won the triple crown

BASEBALL | Carl Yastrzemski didn't know he made history until he read about it in the newspaper.

The son of a Long Island potato farmer was too wrapped up in the tight 1967 pennant race, strange territory for a Red Sox team that finished ninth in the AL the previous two seasons.

With each passing season, the scope of his accomplishment grows. Through those 40 years, not one player has combined the power and productivity to match his feat — leading the league in homers, RBI and batting average.

Alex Rodriguez has topped the AL in all three categories, but never in the same year. The same with Barry Bonds in the NL. David Ortiz was first in the AL in homers and RBI last season but hit just .287.

Carl Yastrzemski hit .326 with 44 homers and 121 RBI (all MLB's best) in 1967.

With fewer than two weeks left in this season, A-Rod is a shoo-in for the AL home run and RBI titles but has no shot at the batting crown.

Only 10 players have won the Triple Crown. Ted Williams and Rogers Hornsby did it twice. Mickey Mantle won it in 1956 and Frank Robinson in 1966.

Willie Mays? Hank Aaron? Never.

Babe Ruth? Close. He led the AL in batting average and homers in 1924 but was second in RBI with 121, eight behind Goose Goslin.

"The combination of all three, it's hard to do," Rodriguez said. "Usually, guys that are thumpers for power hit .260, .270. Usually, guys that are .330, .340, those guys hit 10 or 12 home runs."

TURNOVER: Patriots coach Bill Belichick will comply with the NFL's latest request in its spying investigation by providing any notes or tapes made from video recordings similar to those that drew a stiff penalty against him and the team. "Of course," he said, when asked about the request. NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell said he is confident the team will comply. (AP)

Germany Enters Quarters

England advances, too; U.S. needs tie vs. Nigeria in World Cup

WOMEN'S WORLD CUP | Defending champion Germany, with a record-setting goal from Birgit Prinz, beat Japan 2-0 to advance to the quarter-finals of the Women's World Cup.

England was the second team to advance from Group A with a 6-1 win over Argentina.

Germany dominated the game and opened the scoring when the ball fell to Prinz's feet off a corner kick in the first half. She quickly buried the ball into the top of the goal for her 13th goal in World Cup finals competition. That breaks the record Prinz shared with American Michelle Akers. Renate Lingor added a late penalty for Germany.

Germany will meet the second-place team from Group B — probably the United States or North Korea. England gets the winner of Group

B, which wraps up on Tuesday.

A tie against Nigeria would be enough to advance the United States, which is unbeaten in 49 games. However, a victory in the final Group B game might ensure an easier opponent in the quarterfinal.

North Korea, which faces Sweden in its group final on Tuesday, and the United States are tied in the first six categories used to break ties, but the U.S. has one less yellow card. Both teams are favored to win, and the top spot should go to the team that has the bigger margin of victory. (AP)

HE'S MAKIN' IT: Soulja Boy started with the Internet but now is going global. Here, he performs on MTV's "TRL" in August.

Tech and Soul

Using the Web and a catchy dance, this MC made himself known

ONLINE | The out-of-nowhere success of Soulja Boy's debut single, "Crank Dat (Soulja Boy)," has become the latest Internet phenomenon to catch radio and record labels off guard.

The 16-year-old MC, whose real name is DeAndre Way, has racked up 10 million MySpace hits and inspired thousands of YouTube videos featuring fan interpretations of his "Superman" dance. Initially a viral sensation, "Crank Dat" is No. 4 on Billboard's Hot R&B/Hip-Hop Songs chart and No. 1 on The Billboard Hot 100, and Beyonce has even incorporated the "Superman" dance into her stage show.

So as the Oct. 2 release of Soulja

Boy's debut, "Soulja Boy Tell 'Em," approaches, ColliPark Music and Interscope must determine how best to capitalize on the online enthusiasm.

"Soulja Boy is the blueprint for the new record business," Interscope co-head of marketing Chris Clancy says. "He's built his phenomenon all on his own."

A year ago, "I was just making songs in my house and putting them online," says Soulja Boy, who was raised by his mother in Atlanta but moved in with his father in Batesville, Miss., during eighth grade.

He began playing around with the audio production program Fruity Loops and uploading original tracks to soundclick.com, where artists rate one another's songs.

"Really, I was just playing around, but after I uploaded the first song, I was rated well," he says. "The Soundclick site linked to my MySpace page, and my hits started increasing, so I started taking it seriously."

Enter industry vet Mr. ColliPark (Michael Crooms), who was looking for new talent. He heard "Crank Dat" from several music scouts, and though the song in its rawest form hurt his ears, ColliPark eventually gave in, called Soulja Boy and told him to send over some music.

"Then I started asking kids about Soulja Boy; and they all knew of him," ColliPark says. "Then my attorney asked his kids, but they were already on the computer looking up ... Soulja Boy! So, we signed him."

ColliPark quickly rerecorded and polished Soulja Boy's songs, all of which he produced himself.

Interscope, which distributes ColliPark Music, wasted no time shipping "Crank Dat" to digital retailers like iTunes, prompting an immediate response from consumers (the cut is No. 1 this week on Billboard's Hot Digital Songs chart). The song's video premiered Aug. 10 on Yahoo Music and has already been named Jam of the Week on MTV2. HILLARY CROSLY (BILLBOARD)

McEntire's Harmonies for 2

The queen of country croons with some of the industry's finest

MUSIC | As a country singer who's had success on television, on Broadway and as an author, Reba McEntire has arguably achieved the broadest-based success of any Nashville artist of her generation. So, naturally, an album pairing her with other singers would cover as wide a territory as the many mountains she's scaled.

With "Duets," she does just that. Besides the expected country partners — Kenny Chesney, Faith Hill and Rascal Flatts among them — McEntire joins forces with everyone from pop stars Justin Timberlake and Kelly Clarkson to classic rocker Don Henley to veteran singer-songwriter Carole King.

To her credit, McEntire challenges herself by pairing with several strong female voices, and the settings only prove how exquisitely expressive and powerful her voice can be. She brings in Kelly Clarkson for a lush, countrified remake of "Because of You," and trades verses with LeAnn Rimes on the emotional tour-de-force "When You Love Someone Like That." Still, the best moments are more subtle, as when Ronnie Dunn waltzes with her through "Does the Wind Still Blow in Oklahoma?" and when Vince Gill brings out McEntire's tender side on "These Broken Hearts."

Have a "Grey's" season 3 marathon before season 4 starts on Sept. 27.

Refresher Courses On DVD

SMALL SCREEN | TV show DVDs are coming out fast and furious now that the fall season is imminent.

And it's nice to see that even subsequent-season sets are including more extras these days, which hasn't always happened in the past.

"Grey's Anatomy" season 3 arrived on disc last week (the fourth season hits ABC's air Sept. 27) in a "seriously extended" edition that includes four episodes presented with substantial unaired content, in addition to the usual array of deleted scenes and bloopers.

Three commentaries are fun and informative: the season premiere with give-and-take between Chandra Wilson and "Private Practice" spinoff star Kate Walsh; the Ellis-is-lucid-again hour, discussed by on-screen mom and daughter Kate Burton and Ellen Pompeo, and "Desire," with Sandra Oh. You even get to hang with Patrick Dempsey off-duty at stock car races.

"Desperate Housewives" season 3 also hit shelves recently, with a featurette going behind the scenes of the matrimonial season finale. No commentaries here (might have been especially nice on event episodes like the "Bang" supermarket hostage-taking), but other featurettes summarize the season's storylines and compare ABC's "DH" with a South American version. Deleted scenes and bloopers, too. Season 4 starts on ABC Sept. 30. DIANE WERTS (NEWSDAY)

Are you Depressed?

Have you been diagnosed with Major Depressive Disorder or Depression?

Have you tried at least one prescription anti-depressant medication that didn't work for you?

If you are between 18 and 65 years of age, and have had a poor response to anti-depressant medications in the past, you may qualify to participate in a research study, receive investigational medication and study-related physical exams.

ABC pays tribute to music's king in 2 rock-packed hours

HOUND DOG | Thirty years and a month or so after his death, ABC pays tribute to the king of rock and roll with the two-hour musical special "Elvis: Viva Las Vegas" (9 p.m., ABC). "Viva" combines previously unscreened clips of Presley concert performances with covers of his hits by singers Toby Keith, Joe Perry, Chris Isaak and Brandi Carlile. Paul McCartney and Willie Nelson recall his influence on their careers, and younger artists — including 50 Cent, Beyonce, Celine Dion and Faith Hill — discuss his enduring legacy.

TAKE A BOW: After all these years, that Pelvis still captivates the nation.

Is Presley's Las Vegas era something to be celebrated or mourned? Was it a chance for him to reinvent himself and reach his fans? Or a sad final stay in the Heartbreak Hotel?

Fans of Presley's latter period should buy, rent or borrow the 1970 documentary "Elvis: That's the Way It Is," a look at the king as he plans and rehearses the routines that would constitute his nightclub act. It presents a fascinating glance at the artist during a crucial stage in his career (as well as in the development of Las Vegas) during one of its many moments of metamorphosis. Are you infected with Hepatitis C?

If so, you may want to learn more about a clinical trial being conducted in your area. Study participants will receive (at no cost):

- Regularly scheduled study-related doctor appointments
- Close monitoring and study-related care
- Study medication (No placebo)

If you are 18 years of age and older and have been told by a doctor that you have Chronic Hepatitis C (CHC), you may qualify for this research study.

Please call now for more information (410) 465-2455

Sexual intimacy is an important part of a relationship

But when desire diminishes after your ovaries are removed at the time of hysterectomy, your relationship can be affected physically and emotionally.

If you are not satisfied with your sex life after your surgery, you may be qualified to take part in a research study for women. This study will evaluate whether an investigational medication will help give back the desire women with low sexual desire once had.

To qualify, you must:

- be between 30 and 65
- be on a stable dose of estrogen
- have had a hysterectomy with both ovaries removed
- be in a stable relationship with one man

Qualified participants will receive all study-related care, including physical exams, laboratory testing services and study medication.

Healthy Adult Volunteers Needed

HIV is a global epidemic. Currently, 38 million people worldwide are living with HIV/AIDS, a disease that has no cure. In 2005, 4 million people were newly infected with HIV, a rate of more than 11,000 infections each day. Approximately, 10 of every 1000 adults aged 15 to 49 worldwide are HIV infected.

The world is in desperate need of a vaccine for the prevention of HIV infection.

Will you help?

Walter Reed Army Institute of Research and the Henry Jackson Foundation for the Advancement of Military Medicine are currently enrolling volunteers to participate in a study to evaluate the safety of a new investigational HIV vaccine.

If you are a healthy person between the ages of 18-40, are not currently in the US military and are available for 12 months, you may be qualified to participate in a study evaluating this vaccine.

This experimental vaccine does not cause HIV infection.

Please call:

A pro football league for women runs on the love of the game

Lisa Watson has a husband and five kids at home, plus a full-time job. But her schedule gets really crazy in the summer and fall, when she becomes "Tank," a member of the Indiana Speed women's professional football team.

"I just make time, because I love it," said Watson, dressed in pads and a helmet while taking a break from a sweltering August practice.

When football fans across the nation were gearing up for college football and the NFL, the 14 teams in the Women's Professional Football League had already begun their eight-week regular season.

They don't have prime-time TV spots or multimillion-dollar sponsorship deals. They don't draw huge crowds to their games at high school or small-college stadiums. Most teams — with names such as the Las Vegas Showgirlz, the Minnesota Vixen and the Carolina Queens — don't make a profit.

But the women who wear these football uniforms aren't playing for fame. And with salaries sometimes at $1 per game, they certainly aren't playing for fortune.

"I got into it just for the love of the sport," said April Priest, a linebacker and running back. "I saw my first practice and was hooked."

Though women's football has been around for more than 100 years, the current incarnation of the WPFL began in 1999. Dozens of teams offer women the chance to play football in at least three different leagues, said Brian Wiggins, executive director of the Women's Professional Football League and owner of the Houston Energy.

Team members like the camaraderie they've found in a sport dominated by men.

"I just thought it'd be fun," said Sandi Ballard-Groth, a wide receiver and co-owner of the Speed. "I'm a football fan, and I always thought it'd be cool to play. I just didn't know it would be as intensive as this."

The women in the WPFL play by most NFL rules and, like the guys, they study film and pore over playbooks. The result is entertaining, full-contact football, said John Evans, coach of the Empire State Roar of Rochester, N.Y.

"These girls can hit," Evans said. "It's a vicious contact sport, and they don't lay back."

Even so, teams don't put up NFL numbers. At the Speed's Aug. 18 season opener, Speed quarterback Cassie Longcore completed seven of 18 passes for 64 yards and a 17-yard touchdown pass to lead the team to a 16-0 victory over Minnesota.

Still, Wiggins insists women's football is not a "sideshow."

"We're not powder puff," he said. "It's real women, real football. It's the real deal." DEANNA MARTIN (AP)

A secret meat sauce has brought celebrity to a Mississippi store

Hoover Lee's honey-brown Mississippi Delta marinade imparts a flavor that reflects its maker — a dash of the Deep South with nuanced notes of Asia.

"My main thing was trying to get a sauce that tasted like roasted Cantonese duck — that type of taste," the 73-year-old native of China says in a booming baritone.

And that blending of cultures has proved hugely popular, despite Lee's unwillingness to market by more than word of mouth.

It's also putting the fading farm town of Louise, Miss., with only 300 residents, on the culinary map. Recipes and stories featuring the sauce have appeared in regional newspapers and magazines, and Southern Living magazine recently named it an editors' pick.

"It's surprising to me that it's beginning to move fast," said Lee, who has been concocting the sauce from a secret recipe and selling it out of his Lee Hong Co. general store since the early 1980s. "In the past, I've just been dealing with local people."

Now he even gets recognized on the street 1½ hours away in Jackson, Miss.

"That's Mr. Hoover, the Hoover Sauce man," Lee says he often overhears people say. "It was just a hobby that turned into a working hobby now. I've just been blessed."

Hoover Sauce blends the saltiness of soy sauce with the sweetness of, well ... Lee won't say. Whatever it is, it works magic with chicken and baby back ribs, and he says people drive for miles to get it.

Though he has yet to sell Hoover Sauce online, Lee increasingly finds himself packing up jugs of it to ship to customers across the country and beyond. He has sent it as far west as Hawaii and as far east as France.

Today, the store is one of the few remaining businesses in Louise. Several Chinese families carved out lives in the area as store owners, but most have since moved on. The Lees stayed, saying they found a greater acceptance than others in the Delta.

"We didn't have any difficulty here because we were just one family," Lee said.

Lee gave the store to his sons in 1997, but the Hoover Sauce hasn't let him slow down. To keep the sauce recipe secret, he makes it himself and hesitates to even show outsiders the room where he mixes it.

The magical marinade draws buyers such as Alan Holditch, of Jackson. He stocks up on the sauce every few months, when his job takes him to Louise.

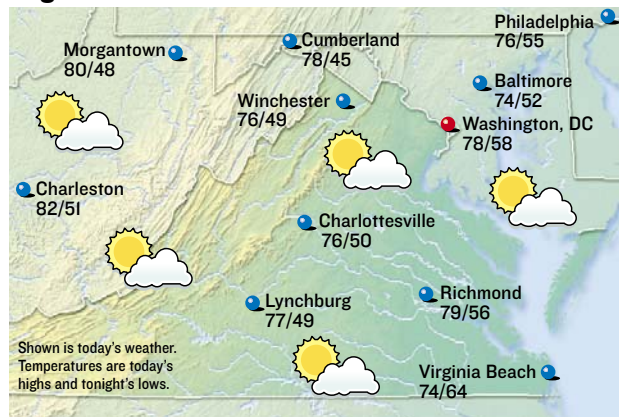

"I'll stop and get a gallon," Holditch says. "We've got so many friends that use it, it doesn't take me long to get rid of a gallon."

As Seen on TV

It's true that beauty is in the eye of the beholder ... to a point. As any red carpet vixen will confess, good looks are one thing; knowing how to work what you have in the right gown is another. Sunday's 59th Annual Emmy Awards put the tube's leading ladies to the test and, as always, some left the couch potatoes across the nation breathless, while others inspired confusion among even the most forgiving fans. KRIS CORONADO (EXPRESS)

Pretty & Preggers?

Obviously, morning sickness is not an issue. Rumored mother-to-be CHRISTINA AGUILERA was a classic and curvaceous vision in her pearly white Valentino.

Save the Hayden

Where's Peter Petrelli when you need him? HAYDEN PANETTIERE's Marc Bouwer creation seemed more high-end shower curtain than fairy-tale frock.

Go Fisch

Everyone loves Pam, but even Michael Scott would send JENNA FISCHER home if she showed up in a Zuhair Murad dress with a bow that big at "The Office."

Beauty

Lightweight Lifting

We once read a book about zero gravity. ("The Hunt for Zero Point," which we highly recommend.) It involved hairy men toiling in basement labs, secret government projects and Nazis. Though Clinique was not found in the index, ZERO GRAVITY REPAIRWEAR LIFT (for three skin types, $52.50, Clinique.com) shares its namesake's elusive nature. The goop has the strange property of lifting skin without any visible means; it felt as if our face was being stretched back by tape at the hairline (a hoary old runway trick, for those who don't know). We looked fresher and more awake, though we think we're being followed. HOLLY J. MORRIS (EXPRESS)

Beauty

Reflections on Lips

L'Oréal's INFALLIBLE NEVER FAIL LIPCOLOUR ($12, drugstores, and, by the way, the Pope called — he wants his adjective back) attempts to set its long-wearing lipstick apart by encasing both bits — the color and the clear sealer — in a mirrored case. This is very clever, except for one inescapable flaw: It instantly becomes covered in fingerprints. If your lipstick is stolen and then recovered, you're in great shape for fingering the thief. But if you want to actually use the mirror, break out the Windex. Once on our lips, the stuff survived for about three hours, though the glossy top layer rubbed off a little on cans and mugs. H.J.M.

Fashion Fit for a 'Hero': She may play a conflicted mama who kicks some serious bad-guy butt on NBC, but there's no denying that ALI LARTER's silky and sultry Reem Acra power-gown could disarm just about anyone, friend or foe.

Discussions

Global Warming

Washington Post science writer DAVID FAHRENTHOLD was online Monday to discuss his story about the impact of global warming on animals.

You say that “we've gotten used to the nature that we have.” But who is to say that this nature represents some kind of immutable ideal?

You're right: Nature today is different than it was a millennium ago, and it would likely have continued to change (eliminating some species and raising up others) even if the climate didn't. The choice here really is ours. Once we understand the kinds of shifts that are likely to occur because of climate change, we will have to figure out what (if any) of that we can't live with.

Suppose that the ice cap in the Arctic melted completely and then global warming was somehow overcome and the ice caps began to form again. Do you think that it'd be possible to repopulate the Arctic with polar bears, walrus and seals from captivity if they'd become extinct in the wild?

Interesting idea. I would say (being absolutely no expert on animal behavior) that it might be hard for these animals to relearn their old behavior after several generations in captivity. But, if we're talking about a day when we've managed to somehow refreeze the polar ice caps, then I'd say anything would be possible.

I'm a wildlife biologist here to make a small yet important point. Our species, Homo sapiens, is part of the biological kingdom Animalia — i.e., we're animals, too!

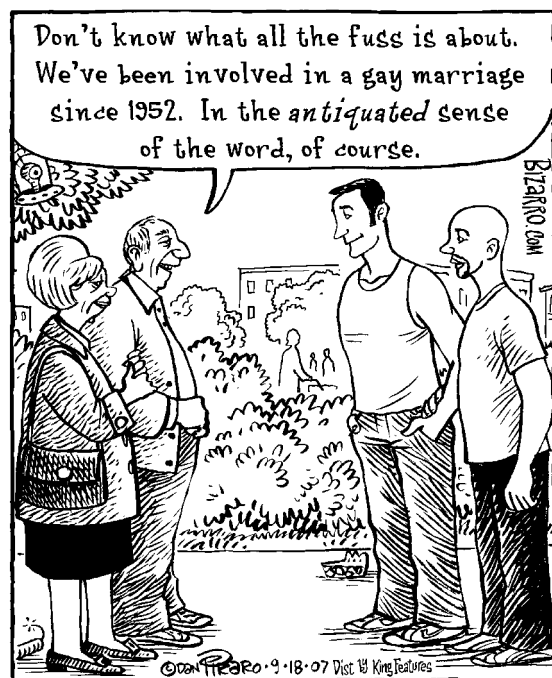

My research didn't include much on how the human animal's behavior and habitat might change.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) That which sounds important very likely is — but you'll really want to pay attention to the unspoken signals in order to get the whole story.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) You may find yourself yearning for something that you do not have at home. Don't keep this to yourself. A loved one may be able to supply it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) You may have doubts about someone else's capacity for leadership, but it is not your job to step into his or her shoes.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You'll find that your surroundings have a far greater influence over you than you might expect. Still, excuses only go so far.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) You're likely to be introduced to something brand-new and exciting — and your life may well be changed for the better as a result.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) Seek and ye shall find — and if you are not satisfied with what you uncover, you'll have the creative energy to make things better.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Take care you don't overdo it in any way. Know when to call it quits — and when to let an opponent claim a minor victory, too.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Stick to the task at hand, and do what you can to avoid distractions of any kind. Concentration and focus are essential to success.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) The quality of your work will not come into question — but the quantity may be lacking for a time. Try to pick up the pace a little.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You're going to have to work hard to control your instincts in order to remain on an even keel and do the things you are required to do.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Cleverness and creativity can serve you quite well, but take care you're not so performance-oriented that you get carried away.

NOSTALGIA House-Husband Fondly Remembers His Career

ED BURNS says it took hard work to woo CHRISTY TURLINGTON. "Friends of ours had tried to fix us up ... but she was like, 'Uh, not really interested,'" the actor-director tells Best Life magazine. "That did not deter me. I just wanted to get her to laugh." Burns was seen as the next Woody Allen after directing and starring in 1995's "The Brothers McMullen." "I was the toast of the town," he said. "All of a sudden, I was semifamous. There were six-figure checks." However, his other movies didn't fare well at the box office and failed to meet critics' expectations. (AP)

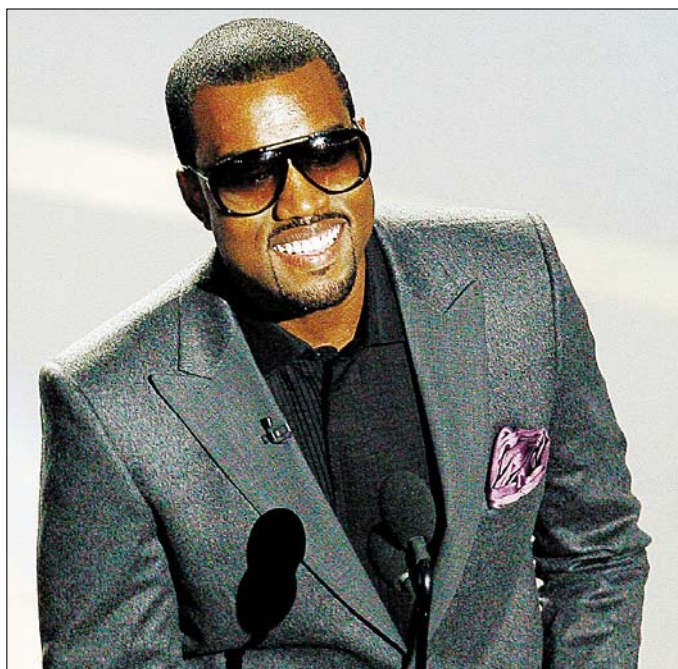

Perhaps next to Christy, anyone would look scruffy and slobbish. Or, just him.

DELUSIONS Madonna Also Declares Herself to Be Santa Claus

MADONNA toasted the Jewish new year with Israeli President SHIMON PERES and declared herself an "ambassador for Judaism." The singer, who is not Jewish, arrived in Israel Wednesday to attend a Kabbalah conference. She and Peres exchanged gifts, with Madonna receiving a lavishly bound copy of the Jewish Bible. (AP)

"I thought Natalie Portman was coming," Peres thought. "Who is this?"

Emmy Crowd Briefly Wakes

The biggest hit of the Emmy after-parties was KANYE WEST's surprise performance at TV Guide's bash. His mini-set included "Gold Digger." He began another song but forgot the lyrics. (AP)

"Lola ... she was a ... hmm ... waitress?"

MEMORY Singer Can't Remember Lola's Job, Cut of Dress

BARRY MANILOW's new album presented a real challenge: covering himself. "Trying to redo 'Mandy,' trying to redo 'I Write the Songs' — it was the most complicated thing I'd ever done in my life," he says. His "The Greatest Songs of the Seventies" includes songs made famous by others but also by himself. (AP)

GOT ISSUES? DR. ANDREA BONIOR WILL HELP YOU SORT THEM OUT

Sometimes Pairing Off Is a Horrible Idea

Q I'm a 31-year-old male who is physically fit and reasonably attractive and has a great personality and strong morals. My issue is I don't have the desire to meet that special girl and settle down. I've never understood the whole coupling thing. My friends and family are incessant with the questions and blind dates. Is this some syndrome I need to take a pill to make me better?

— JUST CHECKING

Consider yourself lucky — many people want a pill to end their relationships!

Coupling off is certainly considered part of the norm in our culture

ERIC REECE

(despite the fact that true couplehood for many is actually a sham). And when any norm is bucked — just try serving Spam at an office party — people will try to hammer in the nail that sticks out. Bravo to you if you can stand up to it. Even though the majority do seem to crave long-term commitment, there are plenty who are genuinely happy going solo, whether they're George Clooney-esque serial daters or non-daters who are otherwise fulfilled — they just don't seem to show up in movie plot lines much.

If you do date, make sure your non-intention of settling down is at least somewhat near the surface, and continue every once in a while to ask yourself — as we all should — whether you feel like you're on a healthy path. But in the meantime, revel in the life you've built for yourself, and keep in mind the good intentions of your friends and family when, for the thousandth time, you feel like sticking a salad fork up their noses.

Q I have a female friend who just got out of a relationship with a guy she claimed wasn't her "boy-friend." But she was clearly upset when it ended. Since then, she's met another guy—who still lives with and shares the bed of his ex-girlfriend. She won't take my cautions seriously. How can I make her understand that this is an absolutely horrible situation to be in? — A FRIEND IN NEED Watching friends make awful decisions is one of the perils of being a friend in the first place, along with occasional dog-sitting. You can't be responsible for her (cringe-inducing) mistakes, but you also can't pretend that you agree with them — and that's what you need to make her understand, even if she can't yet see that she's (breaking out the Kip Winger reference!) headed for a heartbreak. A simple "I care about you and I can't help but worry about you doing this" is a refrain you might want to memorize. Then just practice keeping the eye roll to yourself when it comes time to hand over the tissues.

Send your mental health and emotional wellness questions to Andrea Bonior, Ph.D., at baggage@readexpress.com. This column is not a substitute for one-on-one care.

Pour Some Fake Sugar on Me

PICK A PACKET from the array at the cafe and you'll probably end up with real sugar (which is so delish but high in calories) or the various fake substances (which are free of calories but full of chemicals). A better solution? Have SweetLeaf SteviaPlus ($7 for 50 packets, Buywisdom.com) in your pocket. The all-natural, zero-calorie powder comes from a Paraguayan shrub and has the added bonus of fiber. Don't dump in your usual amount, though — it's 30 times as sweet as sugar, so a pinch is more than enough for any coffee cup.

Boot Camp for Your Big Booty

MILITARY RECRUITMENT would be a lot more successful if it were led by Terri Ann Krefting, who's in charge of the "Crunch Belly, Butt & Thighs Boot Camp" ($15, Anchor Bay). But that may be because she's more cheerleader than platoon leader. Even with a few high-energy cardio bursts, and tons of squats and lunges, more advanced exercisers will want more than the 40-minute routine. But there's an easy way to fix that: Pause and do more reps. Those mountain-climbers will get you.

Beverage Buzz

AS A RULE, energy drinks must have obnoxious names. Syzmo (pronounced "sizz-moh") is no exception. But what makes these slim cans ($10 for a four-pack, Wellnessgrocer.com) stand out from their caffeineated cohorts is the fact that they're all organic — sweetened with blue agave, pumped up with guarana and fortified with green tea. And a serving of the stuff (in Original, Passion Fruit and Prickly Pear flavors) contains 1,000 percent of your daily dose of vitamin B12 (and 100 percent of your vitamin C). Best of all, it's not gross. After one tester sipped, she declared it to be "like soda, but juicy."

Gone Fishing, Yoga-Style

JUST BECAUSE YOU'RE WORKING IT doesn't mean Mother Nature should have to, too. Let the planet take a breather while you're striking poses on the new printed yoga mats from Gaiam ($34 with matching embroidered bag, Gaiam.com). They're free of latex and phthalates (an icky chemical), and they come in three lovely designs. That's "Koi Fish" pictured above, but "Earth Meets Sky" and "Asian Blossom" could also make your fellow yogis green with envy when they see how green you're being. The matching bag has a pull-cord closure to keep your bag from getting away, a zippered pocket to hold your other goodies and an adjustable arm strap.

Stubble Trouble

NO HAIR AND NO PAIN is the slogan that gave the device No!No! ($250, Sephora) its name. At first, we thought it would also stand for "no chance." The idea behind the flip-phone-size gadget is that a thermodynamic wire shoots heat into follicles, crystallizing stubble and telling the root to stop producing so much hair.

That last part apparently takes a long time, and we're not patient over here. But as for the hair-removal part, it's pretty extraordinary. You just insert one of two blade lengths and then roll the thing over your leg (other body parts are possible, but only for more advanced users). It feels like a toy car that's sat in the sun all day — there's no discomfort from the heat. It makes just faint noises, and the scent is a bit like a hair dryer before it conks out. After repeatedly running the thing up our legs, we were initially bummed; our shins were still rough. But then we remembered the buffer pad, which is supposed to get the stuff that's stuck under the skin. A few rubs and we were ready for shorts.

Jumping Back in Time

Exercises of the 1980s are getting a revival at Bally Total Fitness

It took some digging through her closet, but Trevalyn Bell found the outfit she was looking for: flared blue bell bottoms with an elastic belt, a matching top and a hot-pink mesh tunic.

Twenty years ago, this was a hot ensemble, explains the area group exercise director for Bally Total Fitness. She's rocking it again as Bally celebrates a month dedicated to the workouts of the 1980s.

The action kicked off last week with a class led by a tag team of instructors at the gym's Pentagon Row outpost, where they've hung a disco ball for the occasion. (Every club is hosting an '80s night Sept. 20; see Ballyfitness.com for Washington-area locations and a free seven-day pass.)

There are plenty of cultural quirks to mock from that bygone era. Lili Rojas, another instructor, marked the occasion with Cyndi Lauper-style makeup, a side ponytail and an off-one-shoulder sweatshirt straight out of "Flashdance." The workouts are also showing their age: They got hearts pumping, but pretty much ignored muscles. "We do a lot more strength now instead of all cardio," Bell says.

But pining for the past isn't so crazy. Exercise science might not have been as advanced back then, but those workouts involved a heck of a lot more grooving. And what's not to love about the decade that tricked a nation into believing that leg warmers and headbands were OK? "We need to bring back the fun," Rojas cheers.

Terry Sneed, 48, is all for the idea. She was one of the dozens of Bally members crammed into the studio last week. "This is the music I grew up with. It represents that time when we danced together," she says. Even members whose memories of the decade must be hazy at best were psyched: Tyler Khai, 20, doffed his cowboy hat to gush, "The '80s are much better."

Certainly, there is an argument to be made that the music is superior to the tedious techno and Top 40 that accompany today's workout classes. The crowd was thrilled as the first notes of each song pounded from the stereo. "Push It" by Salt-N-Pepa, "Don't Go" by Yaz and "Venus" by Bananarama all drew "ooohs" from the crowd. (Although folks were probably forgetting that, back in the day, they'd have been dealing with an awkward mix tape instead of a user-friendly CD.)

"We do a lot more strength now instead of all cardio."

The moves were quick and bouncy, and often involved jazz hands. "You never stood still in the '80s," Rojas cajoled the class. Students soon became grapevine experts, completing every possible variation: with sharp arm movements, followed by a double leap, etc. There was sweating sure to make Richard Simmons proud.

But after the exhaustingly aerobic hour, the students proved that they were no longer living in the past. "Aren't we going to do something for our abs?" asked one. And even Sneed, who'd like to do the class again, has a modern take on how '80s-style moves fit in. "It's nice for cross-training," she says.

NEWS FLASH ►► WHERE ARE THEY NOW?

Still Perky After All These Years

■ The thong leotard was a remarkable innovation, but what really made fitness so fly in the 1980s was the people. Even though they may not rule your living room VCR anymore, they haven't gone far.

RICHARD SIMMONS. Thoseshort-shorts, that curly hair and that high-pitched voice are still the trademarks of the master of sweatin' to the oldies. These days, "oldies" means the stuff of early MTV—last year, he released "Supertonin' Totally Tonin' 80s."

KATHY SMITH. The killer bod that sold $16 million in workout videos since 1980 is acting her age. Smith's latest release is "Body Boomers Workout," which focuses on how exercise can combat the symptoms of menopause.

JANE FONDA. While she hasn't filmed a fitness video since 1995, some of her works are still available (try Collagevideo.com). And after such a disastrous return to the big screen ("Monster in Law"), we hope she'll find solace in leg lifts once more. V.H.

Jazz Up Your Bod

The dance workout is still popular — and hard!

Pegged jeans said their last goodbyes years ago, but the kick! ball! change! dance step is as au courant as ever — at least in a Jazzercise class.

Although aerobic dance may not boast its former cachet, a lot of ladies (and even some gentlemen) still prefer to get their sweat on by chassé-ing. Last year was the most profitable yet for the exercise program since dance teacher Judi Sheppard Missett tweaked her moves into a workout in 1969. There are now 6,800 instructors around the world teaching 30,000 classes per week.

That includes the gang at the Arlington Jazzercise Center (200 N Glebe Road; 703-671-2055; Arlingtonjazz.com), which opened in November 2004 after years of operating out of church social halls. The main appeal to students like 31-year-old Lori Crandall, who came to her first class five months ago, is what made Jazzercise a hit in the first place: “I didn’t want to join a gym. I wanted something like dance that has a little bit of gym in it, too.”

In each hour-long session, an instructor leads the class in a slew of quickie dance routines. As each song starts, they learn a few simple steps, then repeat them to the beat to get heart rates racing.

Instructor Renee McDonald likens the flow of the class to a hill. “We’ll stretch out the muscles for the warm-up, and by the third or fourth song, we’re kicking,” she says. If a student doesn’t like a particular routine, it’s over soon enough. On the way back down to Earth, they tend to work on strengthening moves.

The formula has worked wonders for decades, but its longevity may also be due to how it’s kept up with the times. Marcy McGinty, a six-year veteran of the program, can vouch for its modernity. “We don’t have leg warmers,” she notes. (The Jazzertogs fall 2007 catalog, available at Jazzertogs.com, backs up this assertion.) The only retro part? “I’m 38, but I look 28 because of Jazzercise,” she says.

LET'S GET IT STARTED

→ A day pass at the Arlington Jazzercise Center is $10, but there are a variety of multi-class options available. The Easy Fitness Ticket is $39 for unlimited classes for the month.

There are 32 classes per week, including traditional Jazzercise, Jazzercise Step and Jazzercise Personal Touch (small-group training with a focus on body sculpting that's available for an additional fee).

→ Other Jazzercise classes are held across the Washington metropolitan area. See Jazzercise.com for a full listing of locations, along with schedules and price information.

May Lee Eckley, 56, who's been Jazzercising for 15 years, appreciates that she's seen additions like bits from Pilates. “It’s definitely harder now than when I started,” she says. “There are more ways to work your muscles.”

The program never forgets about strength training, often requiring weights, bands or balls for the end of class. And students such as 53-year-old Antoinette Allen acquire bulges they've never seen before. “I showed my husband my arm muscle last night, and he said, ‘Where did you get that?’” she laughs. Just as core work has become all the rage in the fitness world, it's become a pillar here as well.

Jazzercise also tries to stay current by using recent Top-40 hits, like “Don’t Cha,” by the Pussycat Dolls, even though it appears that isn’t the stuff to which many of the students usually listen. “Don’t be rocking out like you’re at a Yanni concert. Rock out like you’re at ...,” McDonald said last Tuesday, waiting for the class to fill in the blank. “Tony Bennett,” one woman yelled back. That didn’t stop them from shaking it like crazy, though.

To studio owner Jennifer Gilkey, the most important element of the classes is that they’re welcoming and accessible to everyone. “So long as you can lift your feet, you can Jazzercise,” she says. And it seems people will be doing it for decades to come. VICKY HALLETT (EXPRESS)

The Mat Matters

Yogis around the globe salute the sun together

Teaching the world to sing? Now that's retro.

The mission for this millennium is getting people all over the planet to do sun salutations. Trance dance/yoga star Shiva Rea dreamed up the idea of an international undertaking by yoga studios and students to promote awareness of issues like global warming and AIDS in Africa.

This weekend, it comes to fruition with the Global Mala Project (Globalmala.org). In more than 100 cities worldwide (including such exotic locales as Jakarta, Amsterdam and St. Louis), folks will be gathering to pose with a purpose.

Of course, D.C. couldn't miss out on the action — on Sept. 23, local yogis are headed to the George Washington University's Marvin Center (800 21st St. NW) for a day of talks by yoga and meditation scholars, followed by a marathon session of 108 sun salutations kicked off by Unity Woods founder John Schumacher. Don't worry if you don't have the stamina to flow for the entire two-hour practice. After all, participants will need to save energy for the kirtan dance party at the end of the evening.

Since space is limited, local organizers would like participants to sign up ahead of time at Dcglobalmala.com. They're asking for donations of at least $20 (all proceeds will go to Trees for the Future). You can also buy the D.C. Global Mala calendar ($22; that's an image from it above).

Low Back Pain Research Study

LUMBAR NUCLEUS REPLACEMENT

Greater Baltimore Neurosurgical ASSOCIATES

Greater Baltimore Neurosurgical Associates is conducting a research study using a lumbar nucleus replacement device that is surgically implanted via a minimally invasive approach. The HyrdaFlex Nucleus Arthroplasty System is designed to replace only the degenerated nucleus portion of the spinal disc to reduce back pain, improve function and preserve motion.

The device is intended for use in patients with single-level degenerative disc disease from L2 to S1 that are between the ages of 25 and 70. If you currently have an MRI that demonstrates Degenerative Disc Disease at one level and presents as low back pain with or without leg pain, you may be a candidate for this clinical study.
